About the Program

The Tokyo program was founded in 1978. The core, three-week, four-unit class introduces students to the Japanese legal system and explores current issues in international trade and intellectual property law. Students may also take an elective 1-unit class in Japanese patent and copyright law. Students who complete the core course are eligible to undertake a four-week, 3-unit internship in Tokyo.

Most classes are taught in classrooms at the Asia Center of Japan. Instructors are distinguished Japanese professors and practitioners. Student housing is reserved at the Asia Center.

It goes without saying that Tokyo is one of the world's most fascinating cities and one of the world's economic and financial centers. Consequently, studying Japanese law in Tokyo with Japanese professors, followed by practical experience in a Japanese corporate law office or law firm provides law students who have an interest in Japan with an invaluable educational experience.

Our summer program in Tokyo presents an opportunity to study law in a fascinating city that remains one of the world's economic and financial centers. The core class introduces students to the Japanese legal system and explores current issues in international trade and intellectual property law. Students may elect to take a 1-unit class in Japanese patent and copyright law, which is taught at a convenient time during the internship period.

Academic Component

Core Course: June 2- June 21 (4 units)

1. International Business Transactions

Professor Philip Jimenez
Santa Clara University

This program begins with an introduction to international business transactions, including international transactions.

2. International Trade

Professor Mitsuo Matsushita, Professor Emeritus Seikei University.

After the student is familiar with the Japanese legal system, the course introduces basic international trade regulation with particular emphasis on trade law as applied to doing business with and in Japan.

3. Japanese Legal System

Professor Taniguchi, Yasuhei
Seikei University

The final segment of the core course explores the Japanese legal system, court structures, and basic principles of the civil law system as adopted in Japan.

These three components constitute a single course, evaluated by examinations administered by each professor.

Optional Class

Japanese Patent and Copyright Law: June 2- June 21(1 unit)

Yoshiyuki Inaba, Senior Partner, TMI Associates, Tokyo

This optional course is for students who want to explore more deeply Japanese intellectual property law system, comparing Japanese and U.S. systems, primarily patent and copyright law. This course is typically held at the office of the instructor. The precise timing of the class varies although it will likely overlap the core class; it is typically scheduled in the evening.

Library

Students have access to the Foreign Law Library at Tokyo University and also are free to utilize the United Nations University, which has its headquarters in Tokyo.

Institutional Visits and Briefings

Participants visit and are briefed at the National Diet and Supreme Court of Japan. They also have the opportunity to meet with teachers and students of the Legal Training and Research Institute, which provides practical training and instruction for the legal profession (judges, prosecutors and practicing attorneys).

Class Meetings

Classes for the core class typically are held in the mornings 10:00 a.m. – 12:00 noon and on some afternoons 2:00 – 4:00 p.m. Monday – Friday. Classes are held at the Asia Center. The optional patent law class is typically taught in the evenings. All classes and briefings are in English.

Internship Component

During the month of July, internship placements will be arranged in Tokyo law firms, which have international law practices. Additionally, a limited number of internships may be arranged in corporate law departments at well-known Japanese corporations. Students also have the option of serving internships at major law firms in Seoul, South Korea. Up to three units can be earned in an internship. Placements do not require knowledge of the Japanese language. However, bilingual students are in demand and may find a wider range of placement opportunities. All internships include a special orientation and required internship integration classes.

About Tokyo

Travel within Japan is convenient and efficient. The famous "bullet trains" make all of Japan accessible. Cost of transportation is reasonable when Japan Rail passes are purchased in the United States prior to departure. Tokyo presents an almost limitless panorama. This city of shrines is home not only to the Imperial Palace surrounded by the splendor of its gardens, but is also recognized for its Ginza district and skyscrapers. In addition, students may take the opportunity to explore China, Korea, and Southeast Asia before or after the scheduled program. Whether your interests lean toward sightseeing in cities like Kyoto, Nikko, Osaka, or Hiroshima, or you seek the adventure of climbing Mt. Fuji, the opportunities to enrich your experience are boundless in the Tokyo Study Abroad Program.

The summer is a separate borrowing period from the spring and the fall. You may be eligible for financial aid to cover all or part of your summer expenses. Consult with your home law school's financial aid office to see if you are eligible.

Housing

Students typically stay at the Asia Center of Japan, where classes are held. Each year, the Center blocks some rooms for students of the program; however, students are responsible for making and paying for their individual reservations. Room rates are approximately JPY 6,825 for a single to JPY 5,775 for a double (approximately $65 U.S.) per person per day. Rates may fluctuate depending on current exchange rates. This includes a free breakfast coupon.

The cafeteria at the Asia Center serves good, inexpensive food. Prior participants have enjoyed dining at this cafeteria as well as many other restaurants, since there are a wide variety of restaurants in Tokyo. No institutional board arrangements will be made. Restaurants of all types and price ranges are nearby.
