Hey SCU Law!

A bunch of interesting events are coming up this week. We will be celebrating MLK day in Bannan on Tuesday. We also have APALSA’s First General Meeting for the spring on Thursday. Finally, we have the HTLJ Symposium on Friday.

Have a great week!

Go Broncos!

Monday, Jan. 19th

Martin Luther King Day

The Other Bar
11:45-1:10, Bannan 236

The Other Bar is a network of recovering lawyers and judges throughout the state, dedicated to assisting others within the profession who are suffering from alcohol and substance abuse problems. We are a private, non-profit corporation. Our organization is founded on the principle of anonymity and provides services in strict confidentiality. The program is voluntary and open to all California lawyers, judges and law students. Our consultants and volunteers stand ready to assist their colleagues in all areas of recovery.

Thursday, Jan. 22nd

APALSA Spring General Meeting
12-1, Bannan 135

Welcome back, everyone! Please join APALSA at our Spring General Meeting. Lunch provided. All students welcome.

We will discuss open 1L positions and Banquet Committee positions as we gear up for the new semester. We will also talk about the annual Bay Area APALSA Conference in San Francisco, upcoming professional and 1L/academic events, as well as elections for the 2015-2016 school year.

Join BALSA for a Legal Clinic with the Bar Association of San Francisco

Come gain practical legal experience while volunteering your time and networking with practicing attorneys! We need assistance with conducting client intakes, providing advice, drafting letters, and translation services. Speaking Spanish or Mandarin (or any second language for that matter) is a major plus, but all are welcome to offer their skills!

When: Saturday, Jan 31st from 10:30am-2:30pm
Where: Providence Baptist Church of San Francisco at 1601 McKinnon Avenue

31st Annual High Technology Law Journal Symposium
The Event Will Explore the Intersection between the Open Source Movement, Regulation and Technological Progress

On January 23rd, the Santa Clara University High Tech Law Journal will bring together prominent scholars, policy makers, practitioners, and entrepreneurs to discuss Open Source in the Legal Field. The event will take place from 9 a.m. to 3:15 p.m. at Benson Memorial Center Santa Clara University in Santa Clara, Calif. The agenda is available at symposium.htlj.org.

Open-source software utilizes licenses that allow anyone to use or modify the code. Some licenses require enhancements or changes made to the code to be passed on to the public for free, while other licenses allow the changes to be more proprietary. The trend raises myriad legal issues for companies engaging in open source, including complications in securing trademarks, barriers to nonprofit status, and questions about commercialization.

This year the Journal is very proud to be hosting an Open Source Symposium. The event will provide practitioners with tools to manage open source issues that arise in their particular area of legal practice. Topics will include managing patent portfolio rights in an open source landscape, issues surrounding the commercialization of open source software, trademark policies consistent with Free Open Source Software (FOSS), and open source in the music and video game industry.

The conference program will consist of a morning and an afternoon keynote speaker. Two concurrent tracks will follow the keynote speakers. Andrew Hall of Fenwick & West, LLP will give the morning keynote speech, “Open-Source Licensing and Business Models: Making Money by Giving It Away.” Following, Track One will discuss Open Source compliance, policy and commercialization, including presentations by Ibrahim Haddad with Samsung and Lawrence Rosen of Rosenlaw & Einschlag. Simultaneously, David Uhlman with ClearHealth and Heather Meeker of O’Melveny & Myers, LLP will delve into Open Source technical issues as they relate to medical devices and patents in Track Two. Attendees will break for lunch and networking and reconvene for our afternoon keynote.

In the afternoon, Jono Bacon from Xprize will present his keynote speech: “Building Exponential Communities.” Following, the conference will break into its two last concurrent tracks. Track One will discuss open source and trademarks with Yana Welinder and Luis Villa from Wikimedia, while attendees in Track Two will address issues that arise in the entertainment business guided by John Shaeffer of Lathrop & Gage, LLP. Speakers will present and participate in Q&As.
This is a CLE accredited event, and informative for lawyers and advisors interested in learning more about compliance, trademark policies, patents, gaming industry, medical field, and commercialization of open source, among other topics. The Journal strongly encourages engineers, academics, policy advocates, entrepreneurs and law students to attend.

The Santa Clara University High Tech Law Journal is a progressive legal publication that has continued to maintain a strong presence in the legal world for over thirty years. Its position offers a unique opportunity for students and practitioners to explore traditional issues in the high tech context and the emerging challenges facing computer and high tech law.

To REGISTER for the 2015 High Tech Law Journal Symposium, please visit symposium.htlj.org, where you can find more information about the event. Attendance is limited, so be sure to register soon!

For questions about the Symposium, please contact Maru Rabinovitch at Maru.Rabinovitch@htlj.org. If you have a disability and require a reasonable accommodation, please contact symposium@htlj.org at least 48 hours prior to the event.
