President and CEO

Joseph J. Albanese

Some executives focus solely on growing and managing their business; others look to support and lead their industry peers as well. Albanese, who has led the demolition and concrete contractor his grandfather founded since 2014, is of the latter persuasion. He has served on several industry associations including United Contractors and is currently a member of the Contractors' State License Board, appointed by Gov. Jerry Brown. His trajectory also exemplifies the company motto of "just get it done." He worked his way up, becoming COO in 2004. In 2008, Kevin graduated from Santa Clara Law. He continues to run a small law practice, but the background also gives him insight into his industry's regulatory and legal environment.
