Donald J. Polden
Dean Emeritus, Professor of Law
Santa Clara Law

Donald J. Polden is the former dean and Professor of Law at Santa Clara University School of Law. A graduate of the George Washington University and Indiana University School of Law, he teaches the law school's Antitrust course as well as courses in sports law and leadership for lawyers. He practiced antitrust law for several years after a federal clerkship and handled five antitrust jury trials (including two Robinson Patman cases) as well as several federal appellate court cases on antitrust cases. His most recent scholarship on antitrust issues was a 2020 article in the Santa Clara Law Review on no poach agreements and federal court treatment of restraints on worker mobility.
