Dear Rumor Mill,

You seem to be spending a lot of time preaching to the small minority of law students who are still reliving their undergrad years. Most of us are adults and understand that our legal career has already started. If we aren’t getting drunk every Thursday through Sunday, can we just ignore your reminders?

Thank you so much for asking. As you said, your legal career has started. Please take a minute right now and picture yourself as an attorney working in the bay area 10 years from now. What would you honestly do if you arrived at a meeting with opposing counsel and find your classmate who:

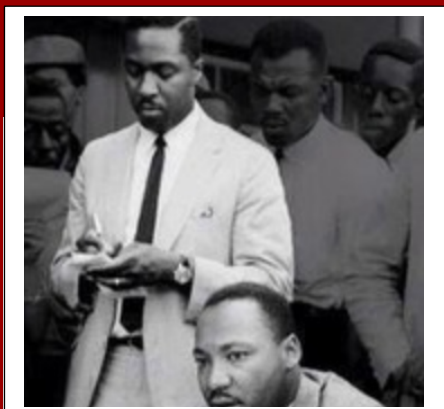

- actually was drunk every Thursday – Sunday
- asked you to sign the prof’s attendance sheet for her when she was absent
- bragged that he was going to get an A in LARAW because his dad-the-attorney wrote his paper for him
- asked you to email her your answers on the take home exam
- never missed an opportunity to tell an off-color joke or make an inappropriate remark
- bragged about taking her Crim Law exam while wasted
- picked fights every time he was inebriated
- was always angry and incredibly rude to everyone
- turned in only a quarter of his section of the group project, 2 days after it was due
- told the truth . . . most of the time

Would you trust them? Would you want them representing your firm or your client? Would you want to have to work with them everyday? What would you say if someone asked you for a reference for this person? And most importantly . . . Are you one of these people? If so, you will be remembered.

Santa Clara Law-Stanford Law Conflict Resolution Workshop
Gandhi King Institute for Non-Violence and Social Justice at USF
SCU Office for Diversity and Inclusion
SCU Law Committee for Diversity and Inclusion

Present

Martin Luther King, Jr.
Radical Nonviolence and “the Fierce Urgency of Now”

Join Clarence B. Jones, Dr. King's personal lawyer, political strategist and speech writer during the last 7 years of his life, and others, as we honor Dr. King's 90th birthday; revisit his core beliefs and commitments; and explore how his moral clarity and vision might guide us to address the forces of backlash, retrenchment, white supremacy and nationalism – in what Dr. King called “the fierce urgency of now.”

RESCHEDULED!

Monday, January 14, 2019, Santa Clara Law
Noon to 1:30 pm, Charney Hall 104

All welcome. No charge. Pizza provided.
Information: dcurtis@scu.edu

Clarence B. Jones is President, CEO and Co-Founder of the Gandhi King Institute for Nonviolence and Social Justice at the University of San Francisco. He is also Scholar in Residence at Stanford University's Martin Luther King, Jr. Research and Education Institute, where he has written and published two books about his experiences with Dr. King.

Margaret M. Russell is a law professor and Interim Associate Provost of Diversity and Inclusion at SCU. She is a member of the American Law Institute and serves on the Advisory Board of the Gandhi King Institute for Nonviolence and Social Justice; the American Constitution Society; and the Museum of the African Diaspora.

Jonathan D. Greenberg is scholar in residence, Director of the Martin Luther King, Jr., Project at Stanford Law School's Gould Center for Conflict Resolution, and Executive Director and Co-Founder of the Gandhi King Institute for Nonviolence and Social Justice.

Next Workshop: April 4, 4:30 – 6:00 pm, Santa Clara Law, Kenneth Feinberg, Special Master for numerous high-profile mass torts, including the Victims Compensation fund for 9/11 and the Las Vegas shootings.

The Santa Clara–Stanford Conflict Resolution Workshop is a collaboration of the two law schools to bring nationally recognized practitioners and scholars to the Stanford and Santa Clara Law School communities and the general public. Through interactive programs, audiences explore issues of interest in the field of conflict resolution and engage in conversations across differences.

Galloway Moot Court Competition is the only moot court competition open to 1Ls!****

When is it? Beginning of the Spring 2019 semester.

- Information session on Tuesday, January 22th @ 12:00pm (Charney 104)
- Sign up in teams of two by Thursday, January 24th
- Problem released on Friday, January 25th and the brief is due Friday, February 1st
- Oral argument rounds will take place starting in mid-February

Where is it? Santa Clara University's Panelli Moot Court Room.

What do I need to do to apply? Grab a partner and complete the first segment of the competition, writing a brief. The briefs will be scored and the top 16 teams will move on to the second segment, the oral arguments.

What are oral arguments? This is where the real fun starts! You will be presenting arguments against opposing counsel in front of real practitioners and judges. After the preliminary rounds, eight teams will move to the quarter-finals, four teams will move to the semi-finals, and the last two teams will compete in the final round.

Who am I competing against? Although you will be presenting your arguments against opposing counsel, your fate in the competition will depend on how your peers presenting the same side of the argument are scored.

What will I win? All competitors will have one of the only opportunities as a 1L to get experience outside of the classroom. The final two teams will be awarded cash prizes!

Questions? Contact a member of the Galloway Moot Court Board!

Seralyn Fields, Chair (sfields@scu.edu) or Angelica Leo, Assistant Chair (aleo@scu.edu)

*All 1Ls (full-time and part-time) are invited to participate.
