

Robert J. Kasunic
Deputy General Counsel
United States Copyright Office

Rob Kasunic is the Deputy General Counsel at the U. S. Copyright Office where h has been involved with a wide array of domestic copyright issues before the Office, including the triennial DMCA Rulemaking proceeding since its inception in 2000. He has also been responsible for developing the Office's position in litigation and has taken a leading role in the revision of copyright registration regulations and practices.

Rob has also been teaching as an Adjunct Professor for twenty years, and currently teaches copyright law at the Georgetown University Law Center and advanced copyright law and policy at American University's Washington College of Law.